Eve Hill is a Deputy Assistant Attorney General for Civil Rights at the U.S. Department of Justice, where she is a member of the Civil Rights Division’s leadership team and is responsible for oversight of the Division’s disability rights enforcement, educational civil rights enforcement, interagency coordination of civil rights laws, and the American Indian Working Group. Ms. Hill is a nationally known disability rights advocate and expert on disability rights law. Her career has included being of counsel with the law firm of Brown Goldstein & Levy, senior vice president of the Burton Blatt Institute at Syracuse University, founding director of the Washington, D.C. Office of Disability Rights, executive director of the Disability Rights Legal Center in Los Angeles, and visiting associate professor of law at Loyola Law School. She started her disability rights work at the Civil Rights Division’s Disability Rights Section. Ms. Hill received her J.D. cum laude from Cornell Law School, which recently presented her its Exemplary Public Service Award.
