Representative Jonathan Singer

Jonathan Singer represents House District 11 in Longmont and northern Boulder County, Colorado. He is Chairman of the Public Health & Human Services Committee.

He has played a key role in efforts to streamline and expand child welfare services, reduce recidivism, and increase access to mental health services.

After the historic Flood of 2013, Rep. Singer served as a member of the Colorado Flood Disaster Study Committee. He passed a package of bills related to business and homeowner disaster tax relief and has continued to work with Long Term Flood Recovery efforts on a state, federal, and local levels.

Before becoming a legislator, Rep. Singer worked with Colorado’s most vulnerable families, most recently with Boulder County child protection and family services and the Denver Office of Economic Development.

He met his wife, Allison, while volunteering at the Boulder Public Library while they were both in high school. They live in Longmont with their daughter, Gwendolyn, who was born in August 2015.
